this book is only partially new it is an expansion of logic and epistemology which was first printed in 1930 and has since been reprinted or revised almost each year the expansion consists in the addition of an introduction to philosophy and of ontology it had been my original intention to add both parts but other more urgent work stood in the way until now as in the preface to the former work i wish to stress a few considerations that have guided me in the composition of this some are more general others are applicable to one or the other of the branches of philosophy here offered 1 brevity plain and direct presentation close knit reasoning and logical coherence these are the aims which have been kept in view throughout 2 the scholastic system and method were chosen for presentation some 30 years of teaching philosophy and theology have convinced me of its pedagogical worth there is no other philosophical system that can rival the scholastic in common sense and definiteness there is no other philosophical method that even approaches the scholastic in sound reasoning and logical force to the beginner who is not yet capable of grappling with superficial systems and subtle methods such a philosophy is indispensable 3 the introduction to philosophy differs considerably from those current today it is not a summary of philosophical problems which the beginner cannot digest and which may engender in him a spirit of skepticism for a like reason i have not given an outline of the history of philosophy with the same problems arranged by periods instead i confined myself to a few important data on the principal philosophers of past ages and i tried to sketch the intellectual equipment with which the student is supposed to begin philosophy 4 in logic the simple syllogism has been made the unifying theme as well as the ultimate aim on the other hand the sentence or proposition has been made the starting point of all explanations the reason for this is the well known axiom that all truths are expressed by us in sentence form 5 nor let it be said even more emphatically is
